Fund Manager's Comments

The SET Index had a sideways up pattern in December, the upward momentum was clearly seen in the early of the month as global risk assets reacted positively to the Euro summit, held on December 9, 2011, that announced a set of detailed plans to solve EU debt turmoil. In the latter half of month, SET Index rather consolidated as foreign investors faded from the market ahead of long holidays. It is also worth highlighting that local institution buying was absent, despite December being the high season for LTF, as the SET outlook in 2012 is highly uncertain and caps investors' demand. Also, recent floods hampered consumer confidence and resulted in higher-than-usual saving and accordingly less appetite to buy LTF units. For the month, the SET Index closed at 1,025.32pts, rising by 29.99pts (+3.01%) with foreign investors posted net buying of Bt12.0bn, reversing the reported net buying of Bt12.6bn in November 2011.

We are defensive to the Thai market in 1Q12 for three reasons. First, we expect further rating downgrades against euro-zone countries and higher funding stress to lead to foreign equity selling. Second, Thai institution may be on the selling side as the long-term equity funds (LTF) with low cost from 2008 are due in 2012. Third, we see political stories such as the amnesty bill and constitution change adding more uncertainty to Thai politics. We recommend focusing on Mid-Cap sectors like Food, Telco, and Construction based on Thai rebuilding, construction spending and consumption recovery themes to outperform during the weak market.
